

COLONY FIGHTS FOR POLYGAMY

Lawyer Explains Strange Findings on Visit to Hidden Religious Colony

By International News Service
UPPER CREEK, Ariz.—A strange colony in the almost inaccessible wilds of the strip north of the Grand Canyon was girding today in battle new charges in court that its members practice a violation of laws on polygamy.

Victor J. Hayek, attorney, has taken over the defense of two men and a woman of the colony.

They are charged with open and notorious cohabitation.

And the Iroquois Spencer his wife known as Sylvia Alfred and Price Johnson—were on hand.

Han Adventure

Hayek had a strange adventure in conferring with his clients where they had fled to a lonely cave north of the Utah Arizona line.

I tramped over miles of rough country guided by an old settler to find my clients. Themselves.

I induced them to come back to their colony of Short Creek where the law was waiting armed with warrants of arrest.

They accepted terms of the law and between us were glad of it. The two men and the woman with several of the women's children had lived more than 10 days on a few handfuls of corn meal, a few bags of mush corn and what jack rabbits and quail they could get.

Prelously, those people had been turned loose by Justice of the Peace J. M. Yaarman when Bishop J. Y. Barlow had pointed out that the original complaints filed by County Attorney C. Lino Ballou were not legal.

Before new complaints could be filed they ran away like scared wild creatures.

If any of the colonists some 25 families and a total of about 200 individuals knew where the refugees were they didn't tell.

But the bishop employed me and with a guide I found my clients in one of the quietest reaches in my recollection.

Fishing in Cave

There they were on a mountain side living in little dark caves. They had built a room in front of the cave. It was unadorned.

But those outdoor folk had bravely selected their hideout from the mouth of the cave. A footpath could see for miles without being seen. No one could creep up on them.

They had very little bedding and suffered the severest cold of that hellish Half Acid where their cave was located.

They had the colonists had an amazing type of self-government in their little settlement.

They left Utah because they felt close to the Book of Mormon which not only permits but prescribes plural marriage. They look at the Mormon church which had banned plural marriages as heretical.

In the Short Creek colony all property is owned by the group. Without legal aid I found those people had crooked what amounts to a common law trust.

Build Own Colony

Each head of a family has one share and one vote in the trust. They bought the land for $400. They have paid off all but $200 of the price in the six months they have been there. They have built a sawmill and tanned a lot of leather and are ready to produce lumber. An irrigation canal is nearly finished. They now get water from two wells and irrigate 100 acres.

FIRE DESTROYS BARN WITH LOSS OF $3,500

Blaze Starts in Straw Pile on George Wolf Farm East of Kenton

Report to The Star

KEARNS, Oct 10.—A fire that originated in a straw pile near the little barn on the George Wolf farm east of Kenton Tuesday afternoon destroyed the barn, 600 bushels of wheat, 600 bushels of grain, 3 tons of hay, a quantity of small machinery and one calf in an estimated damage in excess of $3,500.

The LaPine fire department succeeded in saving the house and other nearby outbuildings.

Members of the Gilbert, Ohio, clover hilling crew at work on the Albert's potato farm nearby discovered the blaze and removed several pieces of inch-thick from the building before they were driven back by the heat. Volunteers also removed most of the furniture from the house tenanted by Leroy Wolf when fire men came.

The loss is partially covered by insurance.

MINSTREL SHOW ON STROLLERS PROGRAM

Young Men's Organization
Will Present Entertainment This Fall

The early fall entertainment program will include a minstrel show to be given in November under the auspices of the Strollers club, one of the newest young men's organizations in the city. The cast will include more than 30 young men and women from the club and the Graduate society of the Y. M. C. A. whose members are cooperating in the show. Lewis Michel is directing the production and the dance numbers are being rehearsed by Miss Cleo Dauner. Mrs. Henry H. Blauffer is pianist.

Poutine work has been in progress at the club on Delaware Avenue and last night the company met at the Y. M. C. A. for an ensemble rehearsal. The solo dances and chorus numbers will be presented in a night club setting with an interlocutor and audience. The costumes worn by the minstrel men will be loaned the club by Marlboro Lodge No. 22 B.P.O. Elks. The following will take part in the show:

5 PM IS A TEST OF HOW YOU FEEL

'How do I feel....
Swell! - why do you ask?'

It is all so simple too! That tired, run down, exhausted feeling quite often is due to lack of a sufficiency of those precious red blood cells. Just build up those oxygen-carrying cells and the whole body takes on new life. Food is really turned into energy and strength. You can help but feel and look better. S.S.S. Tonic restores deficient red-blood cells. It also improves the appetite and digestion. It has been the nation's standby for over 100 years, and unless your case is exceptional it should help you, too.

DIZZY SPELLS

Headache Nervousness

RECENTLY I TOLD you about backache. It was pointed out that the lady is inclined to regard any pain in the back as lumbergo. Today I want to describe sciatica which often is mistaken for lumbergo, neuralgia or some similar disturbance causing backache and other similar pain.

Sciatica is a painful disturbance of the sciatic nerve. This is one of the largest nerve trunks of the body. It starts at the lower part of the spine and continues down the back of the thigh. It divides into two branches at the knee joint and supplies the muscles of the leg, foot and toes.

When this nerve is irritated it flamed or otherwise diseased the sciatic suffers excruciating pain which may be so severe as to completely incapacitate the sufferer for many weeks. At times it is necessary to administer an opiate to give temporary relief.

The pain starts in the back and travels along the course of the sciatic nerve. As a rule it is increased by walking, stooping, or lifting. Even contact with the bed clothes may increase the pain.

Relief is obtained by remaining in bed. There is a comfortable position may be found. A pillow placed under the knee may relieve the tension and reduce the pain. Any form of heat such as hot pads, electric pads, hot baths and lamp treatment may be helpful.

In some cases gentle massage is beneficial. But this relief is only temporary. Complete recovery can not be hoped for until the underlying cause is found and removed.

In telling you about backache I spoke of a disturbance of the sacroiliac joint as one of the causes. This is the place where the lowest part of the spinal column and the pelvic bones meet. Attention should be focused here because if this joint is involved the sciatic nerve may be disturbed.

In all cases of sciatica the sacroiliac joint as well as the pelvic region should be X-rayed. Ovarian trouble or displacement of the womb, as well as tumors and diseases of the spinal cord may cause this irritation. By means of the X-ray it is possible to rule out hip joint disease, tuberculosis and other similar troubles.

The X-ray definitely reveals any bony deformity that might irritate the sciatic nerve.

Localized infections such as diseased tonsils, adenoids, bad teeth and nasal sinus involvement are other factors that must not be overlooked. The diet must include foods rich in vitamins, lime and other mineral salts. Regular elimination and other hygienic habits are important.

Answers to Health Queries

Mr. E. Q.—Does gas cause an anal pectolet? Can an anal pectolet be completely overcome?

A—No, but gas would naturally tend to aggravate any heart condition. If the underlying cause can be removed there is hope of great relief if not complete recovery.

Brother-in-Law Advised Marion Man To Try Vendol

Stomach trouble so bad was unable to work. After taking three bottles of this new medicine, feels like different person, he says.

Mr. Cedric D. Sloat

Three bottles of Vendol along with the little Vendol laxative tablets have certainly made me feel like a different person. I never had those awful pains in my stomach any more, yet eat what ever I like with no distress. My bowels are as regular as clock work, the headaches are gone and now my nerves have calmed down so that I get good sound sleep every night.

I used to have pains in my limbs and a rheumatic condition of my joints, but all these pains are gone and I now have more pep and ambition than I have had for a long time.

Vendol is sold by Sam's Pharmacy, Hennessey & Cooper and all other leading druggists everywhere.

Fascism Fades.

While Premier Mussolini puts Italian fascism through its paces with invasion of Ethiopia and while German fascism is increasing its stranglehold on Germany the fascist threat in Great Britain and the United States is fading. Its condition in France cannot be ascertained, because the love which the French people have for liberty might prevent even a strong fascist movement from seizing complete control of government.

Sir Oswald Mosley was and still is the principal aspirant for Caesarship in Great Britain. A year ago Sir Oswald was being taken seriously by his opponents now he is being taken seriously by only his admirers.
His opponents have ceased to be afraid of him. Sir Oswald, who has taken Adolf Hitler as his model, seems to lack two things which have helped the German dictator—intelligence and sincerity. Furthermore conditions for establishing a dictatorship in England are not favorable
in the sense that they were favorable in a disgraced and desperate Germany.

The fascist threat in the United States
though never a thing of actual organization, was real, nevertheless. The country fancied for a time it was willing to give the President the powers of a dictator. It was willing to lay the foundations of fascism
until the ultimate consequences of its un-reasoning tolerance began to cast long and frightening shadows before them. The danger of fascism has not been destroyed, but it is being faced resolutely.
Fascism in the United States is fading.

In the opinion of many observers it is fading in Italy, too. They regard the Ethiopian adventure as evidence of Premier Mussolini's uncertain position.
Significantly, they do not blame Italy for what has been done, but only the Italian government which they regard as a temporary condition imposed on Italy. In the circumstances of what is advertised as its triumph they see the beginning of its dissolution and decay. Only democracy they are reminded carries within itself the power of regeneration without bloodshed.
Fascism is doomed by its nature to be short-lived periodically with explosion it can not prevent.

A New Approach.

Something has happened to Herbert Hoover as a political figure according to observers who are well acquainted with the former President. He is no longer the discouraged man who was defeated in his bid for reelection in 1932. Instead he is acting like a man who believes he is going to recover the prestige taken from him
by defeat.

Mr. Hoover is not a candidate for the Republican presidential nomination. He is however his party's official leader and he is performing the duties of that position conscientiously. He is beginning to perform them brilliantly also thanks to the new approach he is using.

Mr. Hoover has chosen recently to employ against the Roosevelt administration
the same sharp unsympathetic methods it employed against his own administration.
In his most recent speech he even resorted to satire and humor weapons never before found in his hands. Observers report he used them successfully. The lug-ubrious melancholy which has been the Republican attitude so frequently during the last two years apparently has been abandoned.

Former President Hoover has frustrated his critics by refusing to give in to their discovery. Their jeers undoubtedly have hurt him, but by refusing to acknowledge the hurt he has thrown his critics into confusion. They never counted on having to deal with him in the open.

The Potato Quandary.

It would be an unexpected and grim circumstance if the theory of agricultural control were to come to grief on an obstacle placed in its way unwittingly by the theorists themselves. Yet, there is real danger of such an occurrence in connection with the potato control act.

The potato control act is in full accord with the theory of agricultural control. It is a device to raise potato prices nearly 100 per cent by restricting production.
Potato farmers obviously have as much right to the price benefits of an artificial shortage as cotton farmers, wheat farmers or pork farmers.

All the potato farmers have done is to exert pressure on congress to enact for them the same kind of protection other farmers have been given. The potato act is a logical consequence of the experiments which preceded it. Those experiments worked, potato control should work, too.

Nevertheless the department of agriculture
is represented by Secretary Wallace,
has taken the position that the potato control act is unenforceable and that the department therefore will not try to enforce it.
Naturally, there has been a good deal of protest. Potato farmers are charging the secretary of agriculture with the intention of nullifying a law. To his explanation that no money was provided to enforce the act critics reply that money could be found if it were wanted.

The policy of raising prices by reducing output has caused substantial increases in living costs with resultant benefits for farmers. Potato farmers were on solid ground when they asked for federal control. They knew what could be done and they are still eager for a demonstration.
All they ask is a logical extension of an uneconomic theory which the new deal has endorsed in other applications. The new dealers, who never dreamed agricultural control would lead to such a monstrosity are in a quandary. They can't repudiate their own reasoning nor can they stand behind it.

Miscalculation.

President Roosevelt has been commanded many times for his extraordinary political ability. Most commentators have agreed that he is one of the ablest politicians to win the presidency.

Something has been happening to Mr.
Roosevelt or to his reputation however.
The effect has been to change popular opinion of him from that of unusual acuity now to less than usual acuteness. The President is no longer conceded to be the possessor of the magic touch in politics.

His plagiarized letter to clergymen which gave every recipient who desired to do so an opportunity to leap into attention with an abusive reply, certainly was anything but a master stroke of strategy. His breathing spell speech in which he flattered his liberal supporters without assuring his conservative opponents gained nothing for him except an increasing amount of doubt concerning his actual intentions.

Mr. Roosevelt added to doubt further more by the tactics he employed on his western trip. He adopted the full dinner pail theme in the face of a huge unemployment problem which his spending policy has not been able to solve. He appealed for support on the basis of his success in overcoming the depression in stead of on a basis of his attempt to overcome the depression. Consequently any thing which marks the aspect of improvement between now and the next presidential election will be traced to President
Hoover instead of to his opposition.

These do not seem to be the signs of sound political strategy. Mr. Roosevelt apparently works under the same handicap
in politics which he has found so embarassing in his duties as executive. He seems unable to discriminate exactly between the good ideas and the bad ones even to the extent of using ideas he has rejected previously or of injecting them after having approved them at some former time. He has been a radical liberal and a conservative in the last two and a half years depending on what he judged was the country's mood. If at the present time no one knows exactly what he is or isn't that is proof of miscalculation on his part.

A surprising residential cut de sac in Greenwich Village is called Gross Court on a serene block of Cross Street. It is entered from the sidewalk through an iron gate arched in brick. Beyond is a sweep of green court, a scatter of houses and several reminders of graceful walks. The houses are six in a row of red brick, big end and with sky blue shutters and hal-closed windows. There is a pool of incipient mud, big bunches of birch and a pile of fallen leaves.

Bethleem Hill—It is the worshippers—
the most fervent first night following of her own. Indeed it amounts to a cult.
The moment she appears from the whiz
the huzza begins and lasts until the alarm goes off to usher in a restraining Pulitzer.

A COMBINED LUNCHEON AND BEWING MEETING yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs F J Longshore of 339 East Church street opened the season's activities of the Woman's board of the Marion City hospital. Associate hostesses were Mrs J A Dodd and Mrs C M Howser. Covers were laid for about 20 members at luncheon.

Mrs T E Bonnannette who will head the board this year presided. A part of the afternoon was devoted to serving for the City hospital. During a business session Jeanne E Grundy, superintendent manager of the City hospital gave a talk in which he presented the present needs of the hospital in which the board members are interested. It was voted to hold the annual holiday dance.

The next meeting will be Oct. 24 at the home of Mrs Wilbur Bynes on Bellefontaine avenue.

THE Never Ball club at a meeting yesterday afternoon with Mrs William Ikenesa of the Mayne Unesper road voted to present a play at the Green Camp community festival Oct. 18-19 at the Green Camp school.

Following devotions by Mrs Floyd Unesper the members responded to roll call with names of favorite apples. Mrs Unesper and Mrs William Wixhead the entertainment committee for the meeting conducted Halloween stunts in a social hour. Halloween refreshments were served by the hostess. Mrs Ralph Renwick won first honors in both contests. Mrs Harry Ikenesa, Miss Dorothy Bryan and Miss Mildred Ikenesa were guests.

The club will meet Nov. 13 at the home of Mrs Ben Krebs of the Green Camp road with New Berlin and Mrs Elmer Bentley in charge of entertainment.

SILVER DUST DEEPER SUDS
make dishwashing quick and easy

THE two pictures at the right give dramatic proof that Silver Dust does make deeper suds. The first jar shows the amount of suds you get with ordinary soap. The second jar shows the amount of suds you get from the same quantity of Silver Dust.

It is these deeper, richer suds that speed the dishwashing. The active, busy Silver Dust suds get rid of dirt and grease in record time. So if you dislike the job of washing dishes, try Silver Dust. See how its deeper suds make dishwashing quick and easy.

When your grocer's supply of free towels with Silver Dust is gone, he will have no more. After that, Silver Dust will be sold without the towel, at a lower price. So if you want to get Silver Dust with the towel, get your supply now.

FAT GIRLS GET THE GO-BY—SLIM GIRLS WIN MEN

fat for the low way—weak stomachs, diarrhea, constipation, flatulence, etc. There is a reason why so many people find eating slow and often times futile in reducing weight. The reason is often a little gland is not working right. All the blood in your body goes through the liver 30 times every day. If it does not receive enough blood stream about one and one-half crops of fat are laid down in a few hours. Many people take on weight because the body's nature is to burn up excess food. This condition is called "metabolic fat".

Now, physicians combat this condition by feeding the gland the substance it lacks—vitamin E. This is done by giving the patient tablets based on the same scientific method used by doctors. Some women waste their time by taking salts and laxatives for their actions. These are temporary treatments that may not help. It is a better idea to get rid of excess fat. The formula will take care of you know just what you are taking. Don't waste Marmite today from druggists.

HIGH COURAGE.

Anne found Rob and Sharlee dancing.

these traps. If you're not smart enough to find out, I'll bring someone down here who can.

"And you, Rob, even in Portland were in a position to know to whom the firm's money was going. Check that end immediately. I work with men who go out in boats and I will not tolerate any deviation from this plan. That's all."

He arose, but Anne noticed Rob was on his feet, facing her father, eyes narrowed in anger.

Anne stood by helplessly as Crocker spoke. "You got that cock and bull story from John Neuman," he stated belligerently.

"I did no such thing." Farnsworth retorted. "Tom, there was in my office while I talked to John. I didn't know Tom was there. He kept his presence suspiciously quiet. I'm glad now that he did because he can prove Neuman refused to talk; insisted he had no proof of any of the trouble you said had brought you down from Portland."

And then as an added shot, "Neuman isn't the kind of a man to condemn another without proof."

"Meaning I am?" demanded Crocker.

Inke Farnsworth stared at Rob as if he were only now seeing him for the first time. "I don't know," he answered frankly, "are you?"

"Mr. Farnsworth," Rob's voice was trembling. "I appreciate the fact that you are my employer, the father of the girl I'm going to marry, but no man can talk to me like that."

"Like what?" asked Farnsworth, calmly.

"Like I had—"

"Rob, quiet down." Tom Farley was beside the younger man, "get hold of yourself. Overlook this, Luke, the boy's upset, he had a tough day."

"You see, Luke, we folks who've worked around Astoria within the last five years know Neuman. The Flans think he wears a halo and wings because he has a college education and a knack of getting along with big business men. Rob, here, knows his influence over the fishermen and he suspects him of playing them against our cannerymen. Naturally, as an employee, and a future son-in-law, he's interested."

Anne clung to her father's arm. For once she agreed with Farley. It explained Rob's feeling towards Neuman on the wharves...and yet, what was there in what her father had said to arouse such anger in Rob?

"Daddy," she looked up at him, "please, I love you both so much."

Farnsworth looked down and the grim lines of his face relaxed. "You love us both," he repeated, "all right. Goodnight Rob, Tom, thanks for the car, Lee. Come on Anne, see mother and me out to the car."

Lucinda was waiting and the three hurried through the rain to the shelter of the car. "Don't like to leave you troubled, like this Anne-child," Farnsworth said, "you'll have to trust your old dad a little when you reach home, and remember Anne, say nothing to the others about Tecla's visit."

"I won't, and dad," she confided, "do trust you, and your judgment, even above Rob's."

"Thanks dear, that sounds good to an old man."

"Oh, I wish you'd take me with you," she cried in sudden panic, as wind and rain rushed in fury against the windows of the car. "Dad you will be careful!"

"Silly girl," her mother chided, "imagine telling an Oregonian to beware of the rain. I'll telephone you in the morning, you're to stay on here, I brought your bags up with me."

Anne kissed them both, clung to them, releasing her hold reluctantly, then at her mother's warning not to spot her gown, rushed back through the rain to the veranda. She saw her mother's profile, as her father switched on the ignition, saw her father's firm chin as he bent forward to release the brake. Rain drenched shrubbery sprang into individual shapes as the headlights silvered the darkness. The car moved on until only the ruby tail light twinkled behind like a malevolent eye.

Anne stood a moment listening to the receding sound of the motor. A wailing wind tore in from the water, then faded to a soft rustle among the first "ghosts of dead ships, swishing their unbroken shrouds." Through doors and windows, "I'm getting married," she whispered. "Mother, tell me, Bob?" She could see the faces of Tom, Rob and George, and she blushed in realization that she had been a bit too bold.

Miss Farnsworth, however, was not one to be easily put off.

"Anne, you're a good girl, but you're not a good girl."

Married Comrades

BY ADELE GARRISON

Party Finds Adequate Conveniences at Old Mansion for Their Night Stay.

AS KATHERINE went up the steps of the country inn with the baby in her arms and Junior beside her, vibrant with the pride of his office as her escort and luggage carrier, Mary, holding Roderick tightly by the hand, and Williams, following her, came up to me.

"Is this where we camp for the night?" she asked, her eyes roaming over the picturesque old inn. "Stop tugging, Roderick." She spoke sharply to her young brother, who was wriggling in her grasp.

"Aw! Mary, have a heart!" he adjured her peevishly. "You're hurting my wrist."

"It won't hurt if you stand still and stop squirming," she told him unsympathetically. "But there's just one little thing for you to remember. I'm not letting go of you until I turn you over to somebody else. As long as I'm responsible for you, I'm going to hold onto you. So stand still. You've been in enough devilment today. You're not going to have a chance to get into any more while I have you in charge. Say! Auntie Madge! This is a little bit of all right, isn't it?"

Too Much Discipline

I did not dare to look at Roderick, who, I knew, was sending furtive glances of appeal to me. As long as the boy was in his sister's charge, I would not interfere with her discipline. But I resolved to get him away from her as soon as possible, for I could see that in her zeal to make him realize the gravity of his offense, she was robbing altogether too much salt from the wound.

"It's a charming old place," I told her, "and from what Aunt Katherine says, I fancy that it is just as attractive and comfortable inside as it looks to be. Do you mind showing Mr. Williams which are our overnight bags, and have them brought upstairs to our rooms?"

I turned to Williams, close behind him. "Will you please bring up first that big suitcase marked Faith, which is in the back of Miss Verzen's car? That will be all for the baby, except the blankets and pillows. Roderick can take part of them up now. Just turn him over to me, Mary. I'll take care of him while you see to those bags."

"What about the colic, Mrs. Graham?" Williams asked.

"Keep him locked in the car until we have everything settled," I answered. "Then take him for a run in the field yonder, feed him and bring him upstairs, if you don't mind him sleeping on the floor in your room."

"Not a bit," Williams answered belligerently, and Roderick, who had lurched away from Mary when I had said I would take care of him, came up close to me as he could get, looking up at me wistfully.

"Couldn't he—" he began, and stopped while his face was suddenly scarlet as he remembered the "Coventry" in which he was temporarily residing.

His Appeal Denied

"I'm afraid not tonight, Roderick," I said softly but firmly, in answer to his unfinished question. "Perhaps tomorrow night, at the camp—I'll see how things are up there. Now, please take those pillows and one of the blankets—that's right, I'll take the other—and we'll go on upstairs."

I piled the pillows and blanket into Roderick's arms briskly, and taking up the others myself walked with him up the steps of the hotel, where the housekeeper, evidently summoned by the manager, greeted me cordially.

"Right this way," she said, and led the way upstairs to the second floor, where Katherine was waiting for me. She already had commanded a clean sheet, spread it over the thick rug on the floor, and deposited Faith on it with a couple of her most cherished toys, while Junior, scurrying like mad from one side of the sheet to the other, kept the active and determined baby from exploring the forbidden domain beyond it.

I shot a grateful and understanding glance at her. With her usual tact she had saved the day for Roderick, forbidden in his tempestuous "Coventry" to speak to

Ohio Cities Prepare to Go to Polls

(This is another of a series of stories on interesting elections.)

By The Associated Press
LANCASTER, Oct. 10—Democrats will attempt in November to regain control of the municipal administration offices surrendered in 1920 to Republicans after a 16-year reign.

Dale Kern Democratic councilman-at-large for the last 10 years and Mayor Charles E. Moyer the publican head of the party slated Moyer a former automobile salesman seeks a second term. Kern is engaged in the tin and roofing business.

For the first time in four years Republicans have a complete ticket. John E. Barnes auditor seeks his eighth term and Arthur Everett treasurer his second. Will Ham C. Pickering is a newcomer in the list for city solicitor. Will Ham G. Coultrap Republican incumbent, will oppose William Scholl Democrat for council president.

The Democrats selected Edward Dummett and Herbert J. Seeler to contest for the posts of treasurer and solicitor.

Republicans seek to gain a majority of councilmanic seats now held by Democrats.

ADNOR MAN IS ELECTED HEAD OF BAPTIST GROUP

A E T Ben Succeeds Rev. L. A. Wood of Marion as Association Moderator.

Rev. of Radnor to succeed Head of Trinity at annual Baptist meet at night at the Men's People Union. The Young People's Union elected Miss Emma Osterholz of Fife Memorial church of Marion as president. Gilbert Elliott of Radnor first vice president Paul Beener of Ostrander second vice president, and Miss Irma Ludwig of Prospect, secretary treasurer.

The young people of the Fife Memorial church won the picture awarded on the basis of work done during the year, the number in attendance at the meeting and the miles traveled to be present. Ten societies from Morral Grand Prairie Emmanuel, Fife Memorial and Trinity of Marion, Prospect, Richwood, Ostrander, Springdale and Radnor competed for the picture.

The Prospect delegation of women attending the Wednesday afternoon session which was given over to mission work was awarded the attendance banner for having the largest delegation in proportion to the miles traveled.

The 1936 will be held Oct. 6 at the Prospect Baptist church. It was decided to hold a quarterly meeting of the mission society in January at Trinity church in Marion.

The principal speakers at the Tuesday morning and afternoon sessions were Rev. O. M. Lashey of Ostrander, Rev. R. G. Van Court of Green Camp, Rev. A. W. McDaniels of St. Mary's, Rev. F. Long of Delaware, Rev. Haro

Conditioner of Film Stars Says Women Are Slimmer

By International News Service

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. — He's soothed the jinx of Doug Fairbanks Sr. and paddled Joan Blondell and Glenda Farrell.

He's fought with Jimmy Cagney and Pat O'Brien and knows a lot about William Powell, Myrna Loy, Ruby Keeler, Kay Francis, Dolores del Rio, Betty Davis and all the real names in Hollywood.

His name is Louis Hippie but everyone calls him "Hippie" for he has been working in Hollywood for 26 years to keep the actors and actresses from getting that way.

Women in pictures today are naturally slimmer than were the feminine stars of one and two decades ago, he reports.

Men on the average are in better shape physically than males outside the film profession.

LOOSE KNICK KNACK

Women are less knock kneed than formerly—due in part to their general slimness.

Actresses' feet are not larger than they were—but the shoes are all toward more foot comfort and more ease in walking.

In spite of the prevalence of smoking film actresses now have better breathing habits and are less susceptible to colds and pulmonary troubles than they were 10 or 20 years ago. Loose clothing has helped this he says.

Actresses who reduce by diet almost invariably suffer ill effects, reduce in the wrong places and sacrifice some of their beauty.

Hippie makes his charges go easy on dieting. Exercise and moderate and regular eating is basis of his system.

Men players need more help from Hippie than do feminine players but that it used to be just the opposite.

One reason, he believes, is that women stars are, as a rule, younger in years than the men who play opposite them.

The average age of actresses players has grown lower and lower with the years. That of male stars has not.

"DOLY" BOY GROWS BIG

"Only a few women in pictures today have a tendency to grow fat," says Hippie. "Joan Blondell and Glenda Farrell have been very fat. Kay Francis, Dorothy Lamour and Betty Davis have been very, very thin, though."
